

BANKER & TRADESMAN

Infelise Elected CresaPartners Board Chairman

February 18, 2011

Phillip Infelise, managing principal and founder of CresaPartners' National Project Management Group, has been elected as chairman of CresaPartners' board of directors.

Infelise, a 34-year corporate facilities development, project and relocation management veteran, succeeds Gerald Porter, who held the position for five years, according to a statement. Infelise previously served as vice chairman of the board and is also chairman of CresaPartners' marketing committee.

Contributed photo

Phillip Infelise

Contributed photo

Matthew Miller

Matthew Miller has also been elected to CresaPartners' board of directors. Miller, a founding member and former chairman of the CresaPartners advisory board, has 24 years of commercial real estate experience, according to a statement.